FIRE CHIEF KILLED

Herschel Sharp, of Bedford, Comes in Contact With Live Wire.

Fire Chief Herschel Sharp, of Bedford was instantly killed by a live electric light wire while fighting a fire in a big department store this morning in the north part of Bedford.

About 2:10 an incendiary fire broke out in the department store belonging to Will Woods, about ten blocks north of the square in Bedford. The store occupied five rooms of a one story frame building.

One of the firemen was on top of the building when the chief called to him to come down and get a hose which he would hand him. The chief approached with the hose, when just as he reached the ladder he came in contact with a live wire for the street lights which had burned in two, and he was instantly killed. No one knows exactly how the accident occurred, but as the chief was an electrician it is certain he would have been very careful about the wires. He had been fire chief since January 1.

No reason has been assigned for the incendiarism. The bloodhounds were called out and took a trail to a room where two men were lodging, but an examination of the men this morning resulted in no evidence that would connect them with the fire and they were released.

One of the rooms and the stock of goods in all of them was owned by Will Woods, who places his loss between $6,000 and $7,000; with insurance amounting to $5,000. The other four rooms were owned by N. E. Stroup, whose loss is about $2,000 with $900 insurance.

RECORD BROKEN

Time From Louisville To Indianapolis Lowered.

The traction lines between Louisville and Louisville again showed their ability to cope with an emergency situation Saturday night, and incidently established a new speed record between Indianapolis and Louisville, a distance of 117 miles. The new record is from terminal to terminal in about three hours, to be more exact, three hours and eight minutes. A special chartered car made this trip carrying a theatrical troope from Louisville to Indianapolis in time to catch a train on the Monon leaving Indianapolis for Chicago shortly after 2:20 a. m. The performers filled an engagement in Louisville Saturday night and had a date in Chicago for a matinee in Chicago Sunday afternoon. The special car left Louisville at 10:51 and arrived in Indianapolis at 1:59 a. m.

The fastest train of the steam roads makes the trip from Louisville to Indianapolis in three hours and thirty-five minutes which is a reduction in time of twenty-seven minutes for the electric car, over the steam train. The best time made on the trip Saturday night was between Sellersburg and Seymour on the line of the Indianapolis & Louisville Traction Company, where an average of 45 miles per hour was maintained. The average mileage for the entire distance between Indianapolis and Louisville was 37.3 miles per hour. Of course there was considerable delay in running railroad crossings and it also takes a total of about twenty-five minutes to run out of Louisville and from the city limits at Indianapolis to the terminal station. The traction officials are very highly gratified over the trip. The special was in charge of Motorman Chas. McGraw and Conductor Alvin Clark, of the I. & L. Co., and the car was No. 103 of the I. C. & S.

STRONG PROGRAM

Leading Features of the State Sunday School Convention.

The program for the State Sunday School Convention, which will be held in Indianapolis, April 25-28, is unusually strong.

One of its prominent features is its musical side. Touring the United States with the big four (Rev. F. B. Meyer, Bishop Hartzell, Marion Lawrance and E. K. Warren) is Prof. E. O. Excell, of Chicago, who has had, and will have, charge of the music on this tour. Prof. Excell is a musical director and writer of excellent, as well as national repute, and he will bear no small part in the work of the great convention at Indianapolis.

He is also a most effective organizer and has the reputation of assembling a chorus on short notice and using it to the best possible advantage. Moreover, he has the happy faculty of so enthusing the singers under his direction as to cause his spirit and his ardor to become contagious. No one can afford to miss the sittings of the convention on this account, as the opportunity to hear him again may never come.

It is not at all likely that another opportunity will be presented to an Indiana audience to hear four such eminent men as Rev. Meyer, Bishop Hartzell, Marion Lawrance and E. K. Warren, from the same platform. It is only on account of the tour they are making together, that they were secured for this occasion.

Still another feature of this many-sided convention will be the conferences for pastors. Sunday School superintendents, teachers and Christian workers generally. Rev. Meyer, who is known all over the world through his devotional books and his splendid service, will conduct pastors' conferences here, and all pastors in the State will have the opportunity of a lifetime to see the Sunday School through the eyes of the World's Sunday School president. Rev. Meyer and Bishop Hartzell will have messages for Sunday School superintendents, as will also Mr. Marion Lawrance, general secretary of the International Sunday School Association. Rev. Meyer and Bishop Hartzell will also have "heart to heart" talks for the Sunday School teachers. In this also Mr. Marion Lawrance will have a hand, discussing practical problems for the teachers by themselves. All church and Sunday School workers will receive both inspiration and help from these great sources.

With this feast of good things, need we urge you to come?

Suggests Paint.

The Post Office Department is making the request that rural route patrons paint their mail boxes and the posts to which they are attached a pure white color. This course, if pursued, will not only preserve the boxes and posts, but the uniform color will serve to fix their identity as U. S. mail boxes. It is also desired that patrons imprint their names and box numbers on their boxes in black letters about two inches high.

BIG ORCHARD

In Jackson County To Be Given Attention By Purdue Men.

In order to demonstrate that successful orchards can be maintained in Jackson County, the experimental department of Purdue University has made arrangements with T. J. Stanfield, for the large orchard on his farm southeast of Seymour to be used for experimental purposes. The department will have entire control over the care of the orchard for a period of four years, in which time, they believe, much improvement can be made.

A man will be sent from Lafayette to supervise the pruning and spraying, which will be done according to the most scientific methods. It is the intention to spray the trees three and possibly four times before the fruit is ready for the market. The department was to show that a better quality of fruit can be raised and a greater revenue derived, if the orchard is given proper and careful attention according to their methods. In order to show that pruning and spraying is a paying proposition the exact expense will be kept and at the close of the season it will be possible to show the net gains. In accordance with their usual custom the department will allow three rows of fruit trees in the orchard to remain without giving them the attention of the others and this will also be a means to show that pruning and spraying pays.

The Stanfield orchard is an excellent one for a test of this character. It contains about five thousand fruit trees, consisting of apples, peac, pear and plum. The fruit men in the county will watch the result of the four years work with much interest, and it is believed that if it proves successful, more attention will be given to fruit growing by the farmers of Jackson County.

The experimental department of Purdue University has made arrangements to care for one orchard in each county and will make an effort to interest the farmers of the state in fruit growing and demonstrate to them that a large revenue can be derived from their orchards if given proper attention. C. J. Woodbury will have charge of the work and may give some personal attention to the orchard in this county. Visitors are welcome at any time and an invitation is given to all farmers to see the work done by the Purdue men.

Kentucky Prosecutor Encouraged by Conviction of Night Rider.

Lexington, Ky., April 4.—Boone Bush, one of the alleged night riders charged with the raid on the town of Dyersburg on the night of Feb. 3, 1908, has been found guilty by a jury at Marion and sentenced to one year in prison. This is the first conviction of any of the alleged night riders arrested for the numerous raids and whippings in eastern Kentucky, although more than 100 men were arrested and indicted in the past two years. Over thirty others are under indictment in the same court for the Dyersburg raid, and in view of the fact that Bush was convicted, it is the purpose of the prosecuting attorney to continue with the trials.

Miss Aileen Brown, of W. Second street, returned home this morning from Maxville, Tenn. where she has been spending some time with friends.

"Lo, I Am with You Always."

Not alone through days of pleasure,
  Not alone through days of wealth,
Not alone when friends surround us,
  Not alone through days of health;
But when days are full of trouble,
  When our dearest friend betrays,
When the path of life is roughest,
  He is with us "all the days."

Modern Estimate of Greatness.

Recently there were erected in the memorial hall of Yale University two tablets in memory of members of the class of 1853, a class distinguished for the number of great names it has given to the world.

Both of these tablets, erected by the survivors of that class, commemorate the lives of missionaries—Dr. Charles Harding, who died a missionary in India, and the Rev. Hiram Bingham, whose more than fifty years of missionary service in the Sandwich Islands and Micronesia are notable in the annals of missionary service.

The address of presentation was made by the Hon. Andrew D. White, for years American ambassador to Germany, and before that president of Cornell University. He said:

"Among the classmates we have lost were others in church, in state, in literature, in scholarship, who held places which the world considered higher than the places held by either of these men, as things go in this world. And yet, when we wish to leave with our alma mater the names which she must not willingly let die, we have named these two.

"We have named them because their ideals were the highest, and because they sacrificed most to make those ideals real. * * *

"Men like these have given the world something better than any material success in making savage races into twentieth century men of labor and business.

"These two classmates of ours gave to our land, to us, to all our thinking fellow citizens, something more precious than this—noble ideals of self-sacrifice, of the spirit of St. Paul, something of the spirit, we may say reverently, of Christ himself. * * * These names, therefore, we deliver to our alma mater, for the inspiration of successive generations of students in Yale University during all the coming centuries."

These are notable words, and worthy to have been spoken on such an occasion. They indicate that the standards by which successful men of the present age judge of success are not wholly commercial or military; but that the real successes are those that inspire lives to lofty ideals and righteous living.

In the same building in which these tablets are erected is writ large a quotation which is still true, as attested by the judgment of men of to-day:

"And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars for ever and ever."—Youth's Companion.

Biblical Christian Experience.

The eccentric but unquestionably sincere and in his way and field highly useful Christian worker, Billy Sunday, thus gives his Christian experience:

"Twenty-two years ago, with the Holy Spirit as my guide, I entered this wonderful temple we call Christianity. I entered at the portico of Genesis, walked down through the Old Testament art gallery where the pictures of Noah, Abraham, Moses, Joseph, Isaac and Daniel hang on the wall. I passed into the music room of Psalms, where the Spirit swept the keyboard of nature, and brought forth the dirgelike wall of the weeping prophet Jeremiah to the grand, impassioned strain of Isaiah, until it seemed that every reed and pipe in God's great organ of nature responded to the tuneful harp of David, the sweet singer of Israel.

"I entered the chapel of Ecclesiastes, where the voice of the preacher was heard, and into the conservatory of the Song of Solomon, where the Rose of Sharon and the Lily-of-the-Valley's sweet-scented-spices filled and perfumed my life. I entered the business office of Proverbs, then into the observatory room of the Prophets, where I saw telescopes of various sizes, some pointing to far off events, some to nearby events; but all concentrated upon the Bright and Morning Star, which was to rise above the moonlit hills of Judea for our salvation.

"I entered the audience room of the King of kings, and caught a vision of His glory from the standpoint of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John; passed into the Acts of the Apostles, where the Holy Spirit was doing his office work in the formation of the infant church; then into the correspondence room, where sat John, Paul, Peter, James and Jude penning their epistles. I stepped into the throne room of Revelation and I got a vision of the King sitting upon His throne in all His glory, and I cried:

All hail the power of Jesus' name,
  Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem,
  And crown Him Lord of all.
—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

Walking with Christ.

In His teachings Christ has marked out for us the way in which we are to walk. It may at times be difficult to do His will, but it is always safe. He has Himself been over the way in which He would have us go. His life was in perfect harmony with His words. He lived a real human life, encountering its temptations, experiencing its perplexities, enduring its hardships, suffering its sorrows, bearing not only His own burdens, but those of us all. If we follow Him we shall not walk in darkness, but have the light of life. But He is more than teacher, more than example, more than guide. He is our companion in our way. He enters into all our experiences, cheers us in all the storms, is with us in all the deep waters, inspires us with courage and imparts His own strength to us as we walk with Him.

Believe in God's Love.

When God loves us His heart goes out toward us, and with His heart all that He can bestow. All the resources of His power, all the counsels of His wisdom, all the preciousness of His promises, all the gifts of His Spirit are at our disposal, if only our hearts are open to receive them in the day of His power. To know and believe the love God hath to us—here, in a single sentence, is the beginning of Christian life, the history of Christian experience, the fullness of Christian joy.—Bishop Thorold.

The Note of Authority.

In the record it is said that Jehovah spoke to Joshua. That is Joshua's true claim to distinction. He was on speaking terms with the Almighty. He had learned the accent of the divine. Well for him that he had. For there is no denying the authority of a man to whom Jehovah has spoken and to whom Jehovah has said, "As I was with Moses, so will I be with thee."

A LIBRARIAN'S PUZZLE.

Familiarity with books is to be highly commended, yet the particular kind of intimacy cited by the late Senator George F. Hoar of Massachusetts, in his "Autobiography of Seventy Years," might not appeal to the book lover. The story told by Mr. Hoar is of a student, a freshman of about 1842. During the first part of his term the boy took from the college library the largest and thickest volume it contained, the works of Bishop Williams, one of the prelates persecuted by James II.

It was an extremely dull treatise of theology, and the freshman, who had no literary tastes of which anyone knew, was the only student who had ever called for it.

The boy kept it for the six weeks allowed, and then renewed it, taking it back only when the spring came on. He repeated this in his sophomore, junior and senior years.

Dr. Harris, the librarian, was very curious about the matter, and asked some of the boys in regard to it, but none of them knew any explanation. They used to see the book lying on the boy's table, but they never saw him reading it.

At last, during the winter term of the senior year, some of the students broke in unexpectedly on this classmate. It was late in the evening, and he was getting ready for bed. Standing on edge, close to the fire, was Bishop Williams' book. The mystery was solved. It was the student's habit to warm the volume thoroughly and put it into his bed before he got in, thus using it as a warming pan.

The originator of this scheme became a famous bishop himself. Doubtless he acquired doctrine by absorption.

GLASS BOTTLES LONG KNOWN.

Those in Days of Pharaoh of Exodus Were of Splendid Workmanship.

Although the oldest bottles known were made of skins, glass bottles containing wine are represented on Egyptian monuments which are more than 4,000 years old, while as early as the Pharaoh of the Exodus there were bottles made of bronze, silver, gold, porcelain and alabaster, which from their superior workmanship and elegant design go to prove that even at that period the art of bottle making was by no means in its infancy. The early history of the bottle is somewhat meager, owing, no doubt, to the fact that the true bottle has never been a thing of much beauty, expect in a few rare instances, but rather a humble vessel of no intrinsic value.

Bottles are rarely mentioned in fiction, but one must not forget the story of the Bottle Sprite in Grimm's, nor that of the broken bottleneck in the fairy tales of Hans Anderson, which latter is almost more fascinating to older people than to children, owing to the clever way in which the bottleneck endows itself with a personality. The graceful old flagons, the demijohns and the queer-shaped bottles at one time used to contain a certain renowned Dutch brew, all recall the bygone drinking days when it was considered no disgrace to be a "two-bottle man," and when the custom of "joining the ladies" was more honored in the breach than in the observance, the host and his male guests having more commonly joined each other—under the table!

DOANS KIDNEY PILLS
Doan's Kidney Pills.
A SPECIFIC FOR KIDNEY COMPLAINTS

(Fac-simile of the genuine package slightly reduced.)

Burdens Lifted From Bad Backs

Weary is the back that bears the burden of kidney ills. There's no rest nor peace for the man or woman who has a bad back. The distress begins in early morning. You feel lame and not refreshed. It's hard to get out of bed. It hurts to stoop to tie your shoes. All day the ache keeps up. Any sudden movement sends a sharp twinge through the back. It is torture to stoop or straighten. At night the sufferer retires to toss and twist and groan. Backache is kidney ache—a throbbing, dull aching in the kidneys. To cure backache you must first cure the kidneys. Plasters or liniments won't do. You must get at the cause, inside.

Doan's Kidney Pills Cure Sick Kidneys

Six Months of Misery

Doan's Kidney Pills Brought About a Complete Restoration.

CHARLES EASTER, E. Locust St., Watseka, Ill., says: "In the summer of 1904 I was attacked by pains in the small of my back and as the time passed, the trouble increased until my whole right hip was affected. For six months I could not sit in a chair and I was unable to sleep nights. I lost forty pounds in weight and was so lame and sore that I could not raise my hands to my face. I was languid, had no energy and was bothered by a shortness of breath. During all that time I doctored and used a great amount of medicine but to no avail. Sometimes there was an almost complete retention of the kidney secretions and there was much sediment in them. My wife finally persuaded me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. They gave me such prompt relief that I continued taking them and gradually my condition improved. The trouble with my kidneys was corrected and my aches and pains were removed. I am so grateful for this cure that I cheerfully recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other persons suffering from kidney complaint."

HOW TO TELL WHEN THE KIDNEYS ARE DISORDERED

Painful Symptoms—Backache, side-ache, pains when stooping or lifting, sudden sharp twinges, rheumatic pains, neuralgia, painful, scanty or too frequent urination, dizzy spells, dropsy.

Urinary Symptoms — Discolored or cloudy urine. Urine that contains sediment. Urine that stains the linen. Painful passages. Blood or shreds in the urine. Let a bottleful of the morning urine stand for 24 hours. If it shows a cloudy or fleecy settling, or a layer of fine grains, like brick-dust, the kidneys are disordered.

Twice-Told Testimony

A Wonderful Cure Fully Verified By the Test of Time.

MRS. J. M. BARNHART, 952 N. Jackson St., Frankfort, Ind., says: "Several years ago I was running into Bright's disease. My body bloated a great deal and I had such terrible pains in the small of my back that I could scarcely stand. I rested poorly and the kidney secretions contained a sediment, also being distressing in passage. I tried various preparations but steadily grew worse and when Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention, I procured a supply. The contents of the first box did me so much good that I continued taking the remedy until I was cured. I gave a public statement on July 19, 1906, recommending Doan's Kidney Pills and now I can add that I have had no need of a kidney remedy in over a year."

PRAISE DUE TO WOMEN.

To Their Efforts Must Be Credited the Pure-Milk Crusade.

The pure-milk agitation that is now being carried on by official and semi-official commissions all over the country began with the diet kitchens founded by New York women to furnish suitable nourishment for expectant and nursing mothers, bottle-fed babies and sick persons requiring a special diet. At first, says Van Norden's, they paid little attention to the source of milk supply. To-day the diet kitchens not only give out the certified milk that their crusade has secured, but they keep matrons in charge of their stations to show mothers how to modify milk to each baby's needs and to give systematic instruction in child care.

And here we have another movement started by women—instruction for women in the care of children and the business of home-making. The visiting nurse associations—founded, supported and made up of women—began it. Then other organizations, such as the Little Mothers' Association and the League of Home Economics, took it up. Recently the woman physicians of the country formed a public health-education league to give a popular instruction—particularly to women—in general hygiene. The 498 day nurseries in America, in addition to giving immensely better care to the children of mothers who have to go out to work than the mothers themselves could do, are carrying on an extensive and intensive campaign of education.

CHANGE THE VIBRATION.

It Makes for Health.

A man tried leaving off meat, potatoes, coffee, and etc., and adopted a breakfast of fruit, Grape-Nuts with cream, some crisp toast and a cup of Postum.

His health began to improve at once for the reason that a meat eater will reach a place once in a while where his system seems to become clogged and the machinery doesn't work smoothly.

A change of this kind puts aside food of low nutritive value and takes up food and drink of the highest value, already partly digested and capable of being quickly changed into good, rich blood and strong tissue.

A most valuable feature of Grape-Nuts is the natural phosphate of potash grown in the grains from which it is made. This is the element which transforms albumen in the body into the soft gray substance which fills brain and nerve centres.

A few days' use of Grape-Nuts will give one a degree of nervous strength well worth the trial.

THE OTHER SIDE.

With a look of horror and indignation on her usually placid features, Miss Cynthia Barker sat back from the window of the elevated train. The train was speeding above a congested tenement district, and looking down from the window she had seen a policeman clubbing a prisoner.

There had been a crowd round him, but the flashing speed of the train had given her no chance to take in the details of the picture. But she did get a clear view of the policeman's face. Of one thing she was certain; she would know the brute if she ever saw him. And another thing she had determined; she would write an indignant protest against having such men on the police force and take it to an editor with whom she was personally acquainted.

That night she wrote her protest, and about noon of the next day she started down town to take it herself to her friend on the newspaper.

Her way led through a public park, and as she looked ahead of her she saw a policeman sitting on one of the benches. He was surrounded by children, to whom he was telling a story, and the picture increased Miss Cynthia's indignation toward the policeman of the day before. This, she told herself, was what policemen should be like—big, strong and tender-hearted.

She drew nearer, and the policeman looked up at her over the head of a curly-haired youngster perching on his knee and playing with his brass buttons. It was the same policeman.

Miss Cynthia gasped. Then her step slackened. She hesitated, turned and approached the officer. Her hand was on the letter in her pocket and it gave her courage.

"Officer," she said, "may I ask you a question?"

"Certainly," said the policeman.

"Are you the same man who arrested yesterday somebody down in the North End and clubbed him unmercifully?"

The policeman nodded.

"I don't know about the 'unmercifully,' ma'am. But I did take a chap down there yesterday, and I did use the club a bit on him."

"I saw you," said Miss Cynthia, "from the elevated. It was terrible! How can a man who seems to love little children treat a fellow being in that awful fashion?"

The policeman thought it over.

"Did you get a good look at the rest of the crowd, ma'am?"

"No."

"Well, if you had, maybe you would have noticed that they were just ripe to rescue him. You see, ma'am, I don't really like to club a fellow being, as you call him, any more than you do. What I like better is to sit here in the park and tell yarns to these youngsters. But the fact is, ma'am if I hadn't used my club yesterday I wouldn't probably be sitting here today. Hospital or cemetery. If you'd been down there on the street instead of up in the elevated—"

Miss Cynthia nodded, and looked again from the man to the children impatiently waiting for him to resume the interrupted story.

"I think I see," she said, presently.

He Wanted Something Doing.

The late Dr. Edward Everett Hale was a great student of child life. Dr. Hale once dilated on the incorrigibly bad tastes in books that children have. He instanced the case of his own son, now a famous architect, whose taste he had a hard time forming. Jack Harkaway and Deadwood Dick seemed to him the very topmost pinnacle of literary excellence. He yawned over the splendid historical works his father read to him.

One day, however, Dr. Hale had a gleam of hope. The little boy brought him a volume of English history, and said, "Will you read me some more out of this, please?"

"Why, certainly, my boy," the father answered, cordially." "What part would you like to have?"

"Read me," said the little boy, "about Mary Queen of Scots getting her head cut off!"

How a Doctor Cured Scalp Disease.

"When I was ten or twelve years old I had a scalp disease, something like scald head, though it wasn't that. I suffered for several months, and most of my hair came out. Finally they had a doctor to see me and he recommended the Cuticura Remedies. They cured me in a few weeks. I have used the Cuticura Remedies, also, for a breaking out on my hands and was benefited a great deal. I haven't had any more trouble with the scalp disease. Miss Jessie F. Buchanan, R. F. D. 3, Hamilton, Ga., Jan. 7, 1909."

P. T. Barnum, the famous circus man, once wrote: "I have had the Cuticura Remedies among the contents of my medicine chest with my shows for the last three seasons, and I can cheerfully certify that they were very effective in every case which called for their use."

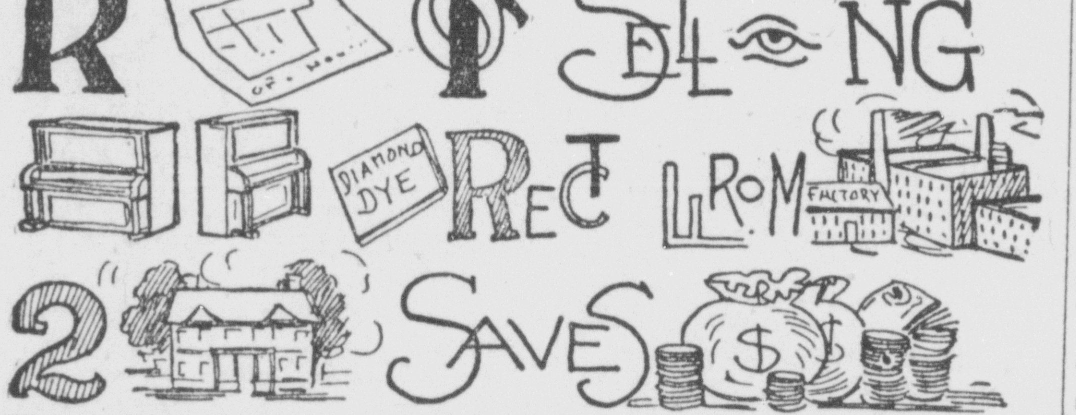
$400.00 SEGERSTROM PIANO if you send us the best answer to the following rebus. Also $14,500.00 in other cash value prizes to advertise our factory and the fastest growing piano manufacturing business in the United States, as follows:

FIRST PRIZE—ONE $400.00 SEGERSTROM PIANO to the one who sends in the best answer



THEN—$14,500.00 will be divided in amounts from $25.00 to $150.00 according to merit. These awards are good just the same as so much money towards the purchase of any new piano in our store.

IMPORTANT—No one who has been awarded a prize in any of our former contests will be eligible to compete in this contest. Only one answer will be received from any one family, otherwise the contest is free and open to anyone in the United States.

We are spending a fortune each year in advertising the SEGERSTROM PIANO direct from the homes of satisfied customers which, after all, is the very best advertisement and we intend to accomplish in one year what other manufacturers have taken fifty years to do.

Lipton spent a million dollars in advertising the products of his manufacture. Wise guys pronounced him a lunatic. Today he is heralded by the crowned heads of Europe, proclaimed the King merchant. It pays to advertise when your goods are right. We sell more pianos wholesale and retail than any other manufacturing concern in the country and our plan appeals to the thinking buyers on account of our system of selling pianos direct from factory to home, which eliminates all middleman's profits.

Every contestant will be answered by mail, but be sure and enclose a self-addressed envelope to assure that your award will not be missent or lost in the mail.

The Pope as Newspaper Reader.

There is no place where the scissors are employed more methodically and to more scientific purpose on newspepers than at the Vatican. A regular press clipping bureau is now in full activity at that great ecclesiastical center. All the Italian newspapers are gone through by a skilled Italian newspaper man, who cuts out everything he thinks the Pope ought to see.

These cuttings go to Cardinal Merry del Val, who reduces the batch of selections by marking with blue pencil the really important ones. These latter, only, the Pope reads. Then, four clerks, who are acquainted with the languages of France, Germany, England and Spain, perform similar work with the leading newspapers of those countries. After that the extracts are translated into Latin before perusal by Pius X. The bishops of every Roman Catholic diocese are also said to forward clippings from papers published within their jurisdiction likely to interest the holy father.

All this mass of newspaper material is pasted in volumes, bound separately, according to subject matter and carefully indexed.

GOOD SHORT STORIES

During the delivery of an after-dinner speech to a gathering of lawyers at Washington, Joseph H. Choate told of a unique sentence once imposed by a Scotch judge. When this sentence had been pronounced, his honor offered the following remarks: "Ye did not only kill and murder the man, and thereby take away his valuable life, but ye did push, thrust, or impel the lethal weapon through the band of his regimental trousers, which were the property of his majesty."

The old gentleman had prospered in business, and took his son into partnership. The young man appreciated this move, but in his newly added dignity became just a little bit too much inclined to take things into his own hands. So his father resolved to remonstrate. "Look here, young man," he said, "let's have a little less 'I' and a little more 'We,' in this business. You must remember that you're the junior partner." A week later the son appeared in his father's office looking a little bit anxious. "I say, dad," he said, "we've been and done it now." "Done what?" snapped the parent. "Well—er—we've been and married the typist."

Sir E. Chandos Leigh, the former counsel to the Speaker of the House of Commons, in a speech full of interesting literary reminiscences at the opening of a free library at Irchester, the other day, told a Thackeray story. "I knew Thackeray pretty well," he said. "Thackeray perfectly abominated anything in the nature of flattery. I was with Thackeray one night when a man came up, and for five minutes administered to the great novelist the most fulsome flattery. When the man had gone I said to Thackeray, 'Who is that?' Thackeray replied, 'He calls himself an artist, but I think he paints as much in "butter" as he does in oils.'"

A member of a house party managed to shoot the head keeper in the leg the first morning he tried pheasant shooting. Next day he again had wretched luck though the wounded head keeper, without malice, had assigned him to a fairly good place. Bang, bang, bang! went his gun every few seconds, but not a bird fell before it. He was much embarrassed. It seemed, too, that at each of his misses the under keepers smiled at one another oddly. Finally his cartridges gave out. He hurried to the nearest keeper and demanded more. "There ain't no more, sir," the man answered. "No more! Nonsense! Why, you've got at least a thousand in that box." The keeper flushed and stammered. "Ah, but them ain't for you, sir. They're for another gent. They've got shot in 'em, sir."

A prominent Yale professor is exceptionally fond of mushrooms. His son, who is an enthusiastic botanist, one day brought some home and told his mother to have them prepared, as a special treat for his father. When the professor came in to dinner he was delighted to find his favorite dish at his place. "These are not all for me, are they?" he asked, not wishing to be selfish. "Yes, father, I gathered them especially for you," answered the dutiful son. Next morning his son was awaiting him with rather an anxious expression on his face. "Good morning, Dad," he ventured. "Did you sleep all right last night? "Fine," was the encouraging reply. "Not sick at all, or didn't have any pain?" "Why, of course not," answered the professor. "Hoorah," said the botanist; "I have discovered another species that is not poisonous!"

There is nothing in a name,
Every day a little less.

Does Radium Exist?

This rather surprising question is raised by Dr. Gustav Le Bon, a well known scientist, who calls upon the friends of science to contribute $10,000, the sum which he estimates as probably necessary to cover the cost of experiments to prove whether radium really exists. His own idea is that there is no such metal, and that the phenomena from which its existence has been inferred are due to unknown combinations analogous to those which impart the property of phosphoresence to certain sulphides. He calls attention to the fact that what we usually call radium is simply the chloride or bromide of an unknown substance. A pure chloride, he says, is never phosphoresent, but becomes so when mixed with traces of certain other substances. He predicts that the result of the research that he proposes would be to derive from the so-called chloride of radium nothing more than the well known metal barium, and holds that the observed radio-activity results simply from certain now unknown chemical combinations.

CONVINCING PROOF

OF THE VIRTUE OF

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

What is the use of procrastinating in the face of such evidence as the following letters represent? If you are a sick woman or know one who is, what sensible reason have you for not giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? For 30 years we have been publishing such testimonial letters as these—thousands of them—they are genuine and honest, too, every one of them.

Mrs. S. J. Barber says:

"I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best medicine in the world for women—and I feel it my duty to let others know the good it has done for me. Three years ago I had a tumor which the doctor said would have to be removed by an operation or I could not live more than a year, or two, at most. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for advice, and took 14 bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today the tumor is gone and I am a perfectly well woman. I hope my testimonial will be of benefit to others." — Mrs. S. J. BARBER, Scott, N. Y.

Mrs. E. F. Hayes says:

"I was under the doctor's treatment for a fibroid tumor. I suffered with pain, soreness, bloating, and could not walk or stand on my feet any length of time. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice, followed her directions and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. To-day I am a well woman, the tumor was expelled and my whole system strengthened. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female troubles to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. E. F. HAYES, 1890 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

Mrs. George May says:

"No one knows what I have suffered from female troubles, neuralgia pains, and backache. My doctor said he could not give me anything to cure it. Through the advice of a friend I began to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the pain soon disappeared. I continued its use and am now in perfect health. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a God-send to me as I believe I should have been in my grave if it had not been for Mrs. Pinkham's advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." —Mrs. GEORGE MAY, 86 4th Ave., Paterson, N. J.

Mrs. W. K. Housh says:

"I have been completely cured of a severe female trouble by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and want to recommend it to all suffering women." — Mrs. W. K. HOUSH, 7 Eastview Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, etc.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Kansas Takes 1,000 Overland Cars

Our agents in Kansas have ordered for this season 1,000 Overland automobiles.

Nebraska takes 750—Iowa 1,000—Texas 1,500. Thus has the Overland—after one year's experience—captured the farming states.

It has captured the cities, too. New York City takes 1,000 Overlands this year. Boston takes 500—San Francisco 500—Washington 500—Philadelphia 450.

Our agents have contracted for 20,000 Overlands—for $24,000,000 worth of Overlands—to supply the demand for this year. That's a larger sale than any other car commands.

Yet, two years ago few had ever heard of an Overland. This sensational success is due to the creation of a remarkable car.

The Simple Car

The success of the Overland is mainly due to its amazing simplicity. A 10-year-old child can master the car in five minutes. Push a pedal forward to go ahead, and backward to reverse. Push another pedal for high speed. There is nothing else to do but steer.

Any man with the simplest instructions, can run an Overland a thousand miles and back.

There was never a car so easy to care for—so easy to keep in order.

20 Per Cent Reduction

The Overland's success is also due to its price. No other maker ever gave nearly so much for the money.

Yet we have cut our costs this year about 20 per cent through enormous increase in production.

The Overland we sell for $1,000 this year is better than the $1,250 Overland last year. It is a 25 H. P. car with a speed of 50 miles an hour.

So with the $1,250, $1,400 and $1,500 Overlands. Each offers a fifth more than ever before for the money.

All prices include Magneto and full lamp equipment.

Ask for the Story

The Overland story is one of the greatest business stories ever told. It tells how this car—the creation of a mechanical genius—has in two years reached the topmost place in this field. And it tells all about the car. Send us this coupon today for this book.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

The Taggart crowd of the democratic party is determined that Governor Marshall's plan to nominate the candidate for United States Senator in the state convention shall not succeed, and are planning to keep all discussion upon that subject out of the convention. It is evident that Taggart is still the leader of the democrats in Indiana and his wishes will be followed by the delegates who are selected. He does not want the Marshall element to name the candidate for senator, as he may want that position himself.

The democratic leaders have not yet decided just what action to take upon the selection of the senatorial candidate, as they know the situation is very delicate. They realize that Taggart has control of the majority of the delegates, but feel that an effort should be made to follow Governor Marshall's idea. If the fight is made, however, the two factions will be at sword's point during the entire campaign,and there would be no hope of electing any of the state officers. On the other hand, if the fight is not made the anti-Taggart crowd will carry out their threat not to assist in electing Taggart's men, so from any standpoint it looks as if the chances for the democratic candidates on the state ticket are mighty small.

DISCUSSION OF THE PLATFORM

Indiana Republicans Fixing Up a Place to Stand.

TO IGNORE THE TARIFF LAW

It Now Appears That the Platform to Be Adopted by Indiana Republicans in Convention Tomorrow Will Not Mention Specifically the Payne-Aldrich Bill — The Temperance Question to Be Disposed of by Reaffirming the Party's Record on the Enactment of Advanced Legislation.

Indianapolis, April 4.—It is probable the Republican state committee today will decide there shall be both a temporary and a permanent chairman of the state convention tomorrow. Senator Beveridge will be the temporary chairman and will deliver the keynote speech, and it is probable that George Cunningham, city attorney of Evansville, will be the permanent chairman. This plan is satisfactory to Senator Beveridge, who, it is said, did not wish to preside. Mr. Cunningham, it is understood, is willing to take the gavel.

The conventon will be made up of 1,745 delegates, and it will require 873 votes to nominate. The apportionment of delegates by districts is as follows: First district, 118 delegates; Second, 125; Third, 99; Fourth, 107; Fifth, 142; Sixth, 141; Seventh, 172; Eighth, 132; Ninth, 140; Tenth, 172; Eleventh 127; Twelfth, 118; Thirteenth, 152.

Next to the resolutions to be adopted by the convention the speech which Senator Beveridge will deliver is uppermost in the minds of the politicians. It is expected that the senator will discuss the tariff and his utterances will draw a large crowd to the convention.

It now appears that the resolutions will not mention specifically the Payne-Aldrich bill. One of the ideas for a tariff plank which is being discussed pretty generally, and which is meeting with favor, would provide for an indorsement of the principle of a protective tariff without mention of the present tariff law. The proposed plank includes a hearty indorsement of Senator Beveridge, but there would be no direct mention of the attitude he assumed in voting against the bill. The plank would be similar in effect to that which the Thirteenth congressional convention adopted recently.

It is expected that there will be a strong indorsement of the tariff commission idea and there may be a hearty commendation of President Taft for his stand for a tariff commission. It is proposed to indorse President Taft's administration and to express confidence in him. This kind of a plank, it is declared, would be satisfactory to most of the candidates on the state ticket.

There is a feeling generally that an agreement satisfactory to all will be reached in connection with the tariff plank and the local option plank is expected to cause very little controversy. There is a disposition generally not to mention the county local option law specifically. It generally is believed that the temperance plank will refer to the party's record on the enactment of advanced temperance legislation and point out that the party has never taken a backward step and is not disposed to do so in the future. This would be satisfactory, in a measure, it is believed, to those who are urging that the party pledge itself against the repeal of the local option law.

WASHINGTON AGITATED

Republican Leaders Looking Anxiously Toward Indiana.

Washington, April 4.—Just what will be the political effect of the failure of a number of Republican state conventions to indorse the new tariff law, which apparently is to be an issue in the coming campaign, is a question that is agitating leaders in Washington. The Indiana Republicans will meet in state convention tomorrow. Advices received here are to the effect that that convention, which is dominated by Senator Beveridge, who voted against the tariff bill, will not indorse the Payne-Aldrich law. The Indiana convention is expected to com mend the principle of the law and let it go at that. Signs now point to the success of the Dolliver-Cummins faction in the primaries to be held in Iowa in June. This means that the new tariff law probably will not be indorsed by the Iowa Republicans. While the Minnesota Republican state convention will not be held for several weeks, leaders of the party from that state declare that no serious effort will be made to have the party there O. K. the new tariff. A conference of Indiana standpatters was held in Washington a few days ago. The advisability of attempting to force through the state convention a resolution in support of the tariff law was discussed. It was decided, however, that it would be unwise to make an issue of this question.

Senator Beveridge is a candidate for re-election. The legislature that is to name his successor will be elected this fall. Some Indiana standpatters express the belief that if the Indiana convention is silent on the new tariff law, that the state will go Democratic. This would mean the retirement of Beveridge, which some of the standpatters would regard as compensating for the party's defeat.

This is the condition of affairs that confronts the Republican campaign congressional committee in the three states—Indiana, Minnesota and Iowa—in which sentiment against the tariff is running high. The bill is unpopular in the Dakotas, there is considerable feeeling against it in certain parts of New England, whle anti-tariff growls are heard in many districts in other states. Despite this, the Republican congressional committee has gone ahead preparing literature boosting the Aldrich-Payne bill to the skies, ascribing to it all the virtues and denying in the most emphatic terms that its enforcement has had anything to do with the increased cost of living or in any way responsible for other ills that have been charged to it. In fact, all of the literature of the committee is strongly standpat. The committee itself is controlled by the standpatters and intends to conduct the campaign on that principle as regards the tariff.

Republican insurgents do not take kindly to the medicine the Republican congressional committee is mixing for them. The chances are therefore that there will be many districts next fall where Republican candidates will not call on the party organization for help. Many insurgents are planning to run on their own hook and have already announced that they will not ask the committee for literature or other help

BUCKETSHOPS ARE IN VERY BAD ODOR

Uncle Sam Starts On a General Raid.

Washington, April 4.—The department of justice intends to investigate the Western Union Telegraph company's connection with the three big concerns that it raided Saturday for doing a country-wide bucketshop business. The federal authorities are going to find out if the Western Union, when they were furnishing the bucketshops with ticker and other wire service, were aware of the use that was being made of their facilities. If it is shown that the telegraph company had such knowledge an action may be begun to include them in a conspiracy charge.

The department's campaign against the bucketshops of the country has not ended with the present proceedings. It is said that the department is planning to get after other shady concerns which are supposed to be doing a bucketshop business. The arrests in Saturday's raids in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Jersey City, when sixteen men were gathered into the government's dragnet, will probably be followed at once by more. That other persons engaged in the bucketing are under the eye of the department is admitted. No more arrests have been reported, but it is believed that agents of the department are close on the trail of some of the men implicated, but who got away Saturday. It is the department's intention to get those who have escaped if it takes all spring, and agents of the department have gone out with those instructions.

Three Aeronauts Drowned.

Berlin, April 4.—A balloon, with a crew of four men, including Herr Delbrueck, a member of the reichstag, started Sunday for Stettin. It met with difficulties from the outset owing to a gusty wind. Eventually it was blown over the sea and fell near Rugen island. Delbrueck and two other of the occupants were drowned.

"From Dec. 20, '08, to March 1, '09, I had three bad colds, one on top of the other. I got so weak I could hardly get around. Nothing seemed to help me until I began to take Vinol. The change was magic. Three bottles completely fixed that compound cold and stopped the terrible cough—and what surprises me most, at the same time it cured me of a severe stomach trouble that has bothered me for 20 years. Vinol is certainly a wonderful medicine."
Mr. Toppan is one of Lynn's most prominent and highly respected merchants, whose word is as good as his bond.

CHIEF JOY OF COLLECTORS.

It Is in Finding That the Pet Treasure of a Rival Is a Forgery.

The collector has many sources of delight, for the most part obscure to the kindly race of men, writes Andrew Lang in the London Post. But perhaps his keenest joy "burns with a hard gemlike flame" when he is able to tell another collector that the rival's pet treasure is a fake or forgery. The psychological reaction, of course, is not peculiar to collectors, it is merely that happiness in the misfortune of others for which the Greek and German languages have special words. If I am playing a salmon, for example, "Charles, my friend," looking on, is sure to say that he fears it is a kelt, not a clean fish. Again, the world may wonder why men busy themselves with the unpopular and unremunerative study of history. The truth is that they are richly repaid by the pure and lofty joy of discovering each other's blunders.

Concerning the latest discovery of a wax bust of Leonardo, acquired by Dr. Bode for a Berlin museum, I must express myself with extreme diffidence. I never saw the bust, nor, indeed, any bust by Leonardo, and if I did see such a thing I could only have a vague private opinion about its authenticity.

Every one has seen, if not the beautiful wax bust of Lille, at least photographs or wax copies of it. Nobody knows where or how it was obtained by the collector who left it to Lille. A romantic theory takes it to be a copy from the head of the lovely girl of ancient Rome, who is said to have been exhumed during the Renaissance, to have excited the people by her charms and to have been concealed again by the church in its wisdom. This sounds like an allegory of the rediscovery of ancient art in the sixteenth century. Indeed, I fancy that I have not been guiltless of a sonnet on the subject. Another guess attributed the bust to Leonardo, and if Dr. Bode's bust is as beautiful as that of Lille, his museum bought it cheaply at £8,000. This is true, whoever made the bust and wherever it was made. If it is as good as the bust of Lille it is a joy forever and at £8,000 a joy forever is cheap. Now, as Dr. Bode is an excellent judge of art, the object must be beautiful. He thinks it good enough to be by Leonardo, and if it be so transcendently lovely in itself what does it matter whether his opinion be right or wrong? The thing in itself must be worth its price.

AMERICAN INFLUENCE ABROAD.

Affects Commercial and Amusement Activities and Also Legislation.

It is self-evident that from Canada's close proximity to the United States and the absence of natural barriers on her southern frontiers the Americanizing of the Dominion should be a palpable fact, but it is worthy of notice that a like process is going on, in spite of the intervening ocean, in Australia also, says the Preussiche Jahrbuch.

Witness the large as well as the smaller incidents of public life. The decrees of the law courts were more frequently founded upon the American than upon British precedents. In clothing and in eating the custom and fashion of America became more and more prevalent. In the theaters and music halls three-fourths of the performers were Americans. The booksellers displayed many more American than English publications. The Australian merchants and exporters looked to America as the headquarters of the world's commerce.

The Americanizing of Australian legislation soon followed, and those who drew up the Australian constitution looked to the United States for a model. Their commonwealth is indeed a second edition of the North American union.

There is also a third section of the British world empire which is threatened with the danger of being Americanized. This is the British West Indies. The natives of these islands have, within the last twenty years, learned to compare the enterprising spirit of the United States with the inertness of Great Britain. The occupation of Porto Rico, the institution of a protectorate over Cuba, the administration of the same island and the undertaking of the Panama canal have excited their admiration. They found in the numberless American travelers who visited the Antilles, calling Jamaica the Riviera of North America, those who knit closer and closer the commercial and social ties that united the States and the English islands.

TWO GREAT LITTLE MEN.

Youthful Royal Cousins in Solemn Exchange of Amenities.

Apart from personal considerations the most endearing quality of royalty is its picturesqueness, and something pathetic and charming always clings about the small person of "the child born to be a king," as the old ballad puts it. Two of the most important as well as the most engaging little boys in Europe are the 5-year-old czarowitz and the prince of Piedmont, heir to the Italian throne, who was born in the same year, the Lady's Realm says. The royal cousins have just been exchanging amenities in the shape of decorations. With all due and solemn ceremony the small Grand Duke Alexei Nicolaievitch sent over to Prince Umberto Nicola Tommaso Giovanni Maria the much-coveted Russian Order of St. Andrew, set in brilliants, while "Little Italy," with becoming courtesy, returned his thanks in the shape of the star of the Order of Annunciata. The joys of swapping are probably unknown to grand dukes, but what else would an ordinary boy of 5 want to do but change his sparkling star for his sister's Teddy bear or box of bricks? Alexis, if one is to believe all one hears, has a great idea of making his four pretty sisters do what he wants. Certainly the little chap may lay claim to a good deal of sisterly spoiling to make up for the embarrassment of being the richest child in the world, hetman of all the Cossacks and in command of several regiments besides. The king of Italy's son and heir has also had military greatness thrust upon him, and the best-selling picture postcard in the Italian capital represents Umberto in a gorgeous uniform with cuirass and medals and epaulets all complete. Some time back an astrologer of sorts cast the prince's horoscope. According to his showing the little boy has many thrills ahead of him, and will live to see the downfall of the papacy, and, still more exciting, the decline and fall of the British empire. So we wish him a long life and a merry one.

VALUABLE RELICS.

Two paintings, relics of the conquered Guerrere, have recently been taken to Boston, to be exhibited in the Constitution. When the British ship was sinking, after the famous battle, Commodore Isaac Hull of the American vessel sent an officer on board the Guerriere to secure some souvenir of the victory. The officer cut with his sword the two pictures from the walls of the cabin, and carried them to Hull, in the possession of whose family they have since remained, until acquired by the Navy Department.

The paintings represent an Egyptian scene and a Corinthian temple, and are valued highly as relics. They were not, however, the only souvenirs taken from the sinking ship. Frederic Stanhope Hall, in "Twenty-Six Historic Ships," tells the story of another article rescued from the waters.

Just before setting fire to the Guerriere, Captain Hull asked his prisoner, Captain Dacres, if there was anything he would like to save from his ship.

"Yes," replied the defeated British officer, "I would like to have my mother's Bible, which I have carried about with me for years."

A lieutenant was sent from the Constitution to secure the Bible, and from that moment the two captains became fast friends, and remained such until Hull's death in 1843.

Years after the battle Hull, as a commodore, met Dacres as an admiral at Gibraltar, and at a dinner given the American on board the British flagship, Dacres showed Mrs. Hull the very Bible which her husband had saved.

A Coat Tale.

Old Tommy Taylor, tailor and
  Retailer, doth retail
Old army coats, and coats of arms,
  And also coats of male.

With coats of paint he paints his coats
  Of arms above his door.
His motto is, "I sow the tares,
  Sow all may rip the more."

He seldom tore his clothes, although
  He'd often close his store,
And then he'd eye his clothes a while,
  Then close his eyes and snore.

To thread a little needle
  He would need a little thread.
When cutting dandy's suit, he'd say:
  "This scissor cut I dread."

In winter he invests in vests;
  In summer pants in pants;
In spring he sows some seedy things;
  In fall he rips, perchance.

Asking Too Much.

The country doctor had come to prescribe for Lucy, the colored cook's little daughter, who was suffering from the unfashionable ailment known as "chills."

The doctor opened his saddle-bags and prepared several doses of the time-honored remedy, quinine in capsules.

Lucy sat up in bed, watching the proceedings with great interest, as the doctor filled each tiny capsule and capped it. But when she heard the instructions, "Give her one of these every two hours," she wailed in terror:

"Is you gwine to mek me swaller dem little glass bottles, stoppers an' all?"

The Better Part.

Mr. McNabber, says the London Daily Mail, had just told his pastor that he was planning a trip to the Holy Land.

"And whiles I'm there," he continued, "I'll read the ten commandments aloud frae the top o' Mount Sinai."

"McNabber," replied the minister, gravely, "tak my advice. Bide at hame an' keep them."

For The Children

Chair Horses.

Lyle Rogers was a little witch of a girl. She was as quick as a flash and darted here and there about her play, before her dignified cousin Eleanor knew what she was doing.

Lyle had sunny curls, sunny brown eyes, and a sunny smile—that is, she had a smile while she was having her own way; when she wasn't, her face would screw up in a homely frown.

One day she went with her mother to visit Eleanor's mother. Lyle loved Eleanor more than any other little girl she knew. Eleanor was always gentle with her and willing to play the games Lyle loved, and willinf, too, to let Lyle be the most interesting personage in the game.

On this day Lyle insisted on playing horse and carriage with the parlor chairs. The two mothers went out for a moment to look at some flowers and they cautioned the little girls to be careful.

Lyle discovered that the seat of the horsehair chair with a little tugging would come out, leaving a great empty square space where the horsehair cushion ought to be.

Quicker than thought she had jerked all the seats out of the chairs. Two of the chairs were tipped over for the horses and Eleanor and Lyle were sitting in the big rocker driving the horses.

When the two mothers came back they were much disturbed to find the best parlor in such disorder.

"Why, who took all the seats out of my chairs?" cried Eleanor's mother.

"I did, aunty," laughed Lyle. "Don't they look funny?"

"Lyle Rogers!" exclaimed her mother. "I will not bring you to see Eleanor again for a whole month. Put those seats right back."

"I don't want to," said Lyle.

"Do it at once," her mother said firmly.

"I'm not going to," said Lyle with equal firmness.

"Do you want me to take you home and put you to bed?" said her mother, still more sternly.

At this point Eleanor had an idea.

"Why, Lyle," she said, with great dignity. "We forgot! Horses never go around with their stomachs out!"

Lyle looked at the tipped-over chairs, with the empty space where the seat ought to be, and saw in a flash what Eleanor meant. In another minute the seats were all back in the chairs.—Chicago News.

The Rainy Day Lass.

Paddle and splash and merrily dash
  Along the glistening pave;
Oh, Rainy Day Lass, when I see you pass,
  I welcome the showers you brave,
When you look so good
In your snug blue hood,
  I'd not have the weather behave!

Flit cosily by, all sheltered and dry,
  With cheeks as red as wine;
Oh, Rainy Day Lass, when I see thee pass,
  The murkiest day seems fine.
That gossamer cape
Does rightfully drape
  A heart as light as thine!

Lucullus and Napoleon.

In his "Bright Sides of History," in St. Nicholas, E. H. House has something to say about the appetites of famous people. "You know already," Uncle Claxton began, "that Lucullus was a great general at one period, and that he led his armies victoriously through many parts of Asia Minor. The kingdom of Pontus was completely subjugated by him; and the spoils collected from the principal cities formed the basis of an immense fortune with which he afterward enjoyed himself and entertained his companions in Rome. But gold and jewels were not the only things that attracted the attention of this man of varied tastes. The city of Cerasus, on the shore of the Euxine sea, was celebrated for its cherries, specimens of which were offered to him as the choicest delicacies of the region. He was so delighted with them that he ordered the fruit to be cultivated on his estates at home, and from that time cherries began to be known in Italy. You may be sure that Lucullus the soldier was a different being from Lucullus the Sybarite. It needs a clear head to win battles and govern kingdoms, and while he was busy with those pursuits he could not have wasted many hours in revelry. He had before him as a warning the fate of Alexander, who threw away his life in dissipation while he was yet young, in almost exactly the same part of the world."

"You were telling us the other day," said Percy, "that Napoleon Bonaparte had no time to think about what he ate."

"That was often the case," Uncle Claxton replied, "when he was out campaigning. He had very little time, and not much inclination. Even in the peaceful intervals of his reign he was extremely abstemious. But he had his fancies in the way of food, and it has been said that he was punished terribly for indulging one of these at the wrong time. Boiled mutton with onion sauce was a dish of which he was often tempted to eat too much, and on the day of the battle of Leipsic, when he should have been especially careful of his diet, he chose it for his principal meal, and dined so heavily that within a few hours a violent colic seized him, and he was compelled to leave the field at a moment when all his skill was needed to avert disaster. Other causes have been assigned for his defeat, but the story which I give you was believed at the time, and I do not know that it has ever been proved false. The harm may have come from his habit of eating too fast, for which Napoleon was notorious. He did not ordinarily allow himself leisure enough to enjoy the few dishes he liked best. His famous rival, was just as careless, and even more indifferent.

Gallery of Statues.

For this game all the company leave the room with the exception of two. One of these then stands like a statue, with perhaps the assistance of a tablecloth, or something similar, as drapery, while the other acts as showman.

When the position is decided upon, one of the company is called in and taken on one side by the showman, and is asked his or her opinion as to the merits of the statue. It is almost certain that some suggestion will be made; in that case, the newcomer is made to assume the attitude suggested, and another player is called in, to whom the same question is put, and another suggestion made and adopted. As each statue is added to the gallery, a great deal of merriment is caused, and in a short time a large collection will be obtained.

Oh, Yes! She Knew.

"Don't you know what it spells, Eleanor?" asked her mother. "Now, think, b-o-a-t. It's something that you see on the water in the country."

"Oh, yes," said Eleanor, "a pier."

"Oh, no, it is not that. It is something we get into when we go down to the water."

"Oh, yes, I 'member now," said Eleanor, "it's baving suits!" and the spelling lesson ended.

FRENCH SUBSIDIZED THEATERS.

It Is Contended That State-Aided Playhouses Are Handicapped.

Toward the end of every year the question of state subventioned theaters crops up. The occasion is the laying before the French parliament of the report, invariably drawn up by a gentleman who knows nothing whatever of the drama, upon the condition of the four playhouses, the Opera, the Comedie Francaise, the Opera Comique and the Odeon, to the running expenses of which the treasury contributes various amounts—$160,000 a year to the Opera and $60,000 to the Opera Comique, for instance. Every year the old argument between state aided art and independent art is revived, and the old question of free trade drama or bounty fed drama comes up once more for discussion.

This time two members of parliament have made an exceptionally bold onslaught upon state subventions by moving that those paid to the Opera and the Opera Comique should be reduced to $80,000 and $20,000, respectively, the London Daily Telegraph says. The reason given is that both theaters are increasing their prices 10 per cent by charging the public the tax in aid of public charities, formerly included in the cost of each ticket. over and above the latter.

The result of the motion, however, is to open up a discussion on the wider issue for and against state subvention of the drama, and this from two points of view, that of the managers' interests and that of the interests of the drama. Even from the mere business standpoint some oppose state aids. In return for its bounties the state imposes many obligations, such as either half rate or completely free performances so many times a year. Unofficial, but, it seems, equally unavoidable, charges upon state subventioned theaters also exist. In one case the free tickets distributed among members of parliament, government officials, their cousins and aunts, amount to $18,000 worth of "paper" annually. In these circumstances, free traders in the drama are confident that theaters lose more than they gain by subventions, and one of them goes so far as to say that if the Opera, in exchange for relinquishing its $160,000 a year from the state, were free to charge what prices it liked, and to bring out only as many new works (which rarely pay) as it chose, Paris "might hear, for instance, Caruso and Mme. Emma Calve together," the former being never and the latter now rarely heard here, and Paris "in autumn and spring would have such a season as that of London and New York, and would regain the place in the world which she deserves."

NOT A HOOK-WORM CASE.

Mr. Swozzleton is a wise man, because he knew how to cure himself of his most troublesome disease. He remarked, says a writer in the New York Sun, that he felt it coming over him again. "I'm afraid," he said, "I've got another lazy streak coming on. I've had 'em before, and I recognize the symptoms." The cure he then proceeded to narrate in the following terms:

"Nothing the matter with me. I feel comfortable, very comfortable; but I don't want to do a blessed thing. Appetite fine, I sleep well nights, life is very pleasant; but the only thing I really feel like doing is loafing.

"I look out the window and see the yellow sunshine, and the trees seem to be actually beckoning to me to come out; and when I get out and smell the woody fall flavor in the air I want to quit work entirely and just idle, just loaf, with not too much physical exertion.

"I think that after I've snuffed in the earth a while I'd like to go down and go aboard a steamer, with not too many passengers, and sit for a long voyage stretched in a chair on the sunny side of the ship and see the ocean go by; just see the ocean go by, with nothing to do but to eat and dream and sleep.

"Yes, sir, I've got one of my lazy streaks coming on; I recognize the symptoms clearly. I'm feeling elegant, but I hate to do a thing. I just want to let go and loaf. But of course I can't; I've got to work. And now I'm about to do what I always do when these streaks strike me.

"Down cellar I keep a sawhorse and a bucksaw and a quarter of a cord of hard oak wood; and when I get to feeling this way I go down cellar and lay a stick of that oak cordwood in the sawhorse and pick up the saw and go to sawing.

"I don't know of any work more back-breaking than sawing wood, and after I've sawed up about three sticks of that wood, why, then, by comparison, the regular work that I have to do seems so easy that I am glad to buckle down to it.

"That is my regular and always, for the time, sure cure for a lazy streak; and I'm going down cellar now."

The tourist who had secured a guide within a few moments after his arrival in Rome spoke crisply to the man. "I've only got an hour or so to spare for Rome," he said, "and I want to see just two things—one's St. Peter's and the other is the Forum. Take me to them both as quick as you can."

The guide engaged a carriage, into which the tourist jumped, and after a few words from the guide to the driver, the equipage started off at a brisk rate. Suddenly it stopped, and the tourist ceased his fire of questions.

"Hop out," he said to his guide, urging him by a slight push. "Now which is this, the Forum or St. Peter's?"

The Youngest Admiral.

Captain David Beatty will shortly have the distinction of being the youngest rear-admiral in the British navy. His forthcoming promotion at the early age of thirty-eight has been the subject of a special Order in Council.

To qualify for promotion under the regulations a captain must have served during peace time for a total period of six years. The Admiralty petition sets forth that, owing to the abnormal shortening of the time on the captains' list, it is anticipated that Captain Beatty will reach his turn for promotion before he completes the full period of six years.

It is also pointed out that he was severely wounded in action in China, and was consequently prevented from receiving an appointment for a considerable period.

In these circumstances the Order directs that Captain Beatty shall be promoted to flag rank in his turn, notwithstanding the regulations.

Captain Beatty is an Irishman. His wife is a daughter of an American millionaire, the late Marshall Field, founder of the great dry goods store in Chicago.

Nelson was promoted to the rank of rear-admiral in his thirty-ninth year.

LOST ESKIMO TRIBES.

Scholar's Account of a People Seen by White Men But Once.

An account of the lost Eskimo tribes of the east coast of Greenland was recently in the Middelelser om Gronland, the organ of the Danish Ethnological Society. The author is Dr. W. Thalbitzer.

In 1823 Captain Clavering was conducting a sledge expedition along the southwest side of the island now bearing his name, which is situated on the northeastern coast of Greenland off what is now known as Koenig Wilhelm Land. There his expedition encountered a party of twelve Eskimos.

The natives who were with Clavering tried to talk to the strangers and to gain their confidence, but failed in any degree to make themselves understood. After the twelve had camped near Clavering's party for three days they disappeared and no further trace of them was found. That was the first time and the last that any white man has seen tribesmen of the now extinct race of eastern Greenland Eskimos. Perhaps those twelve were the only surviving members of a race that has been obliterated in the swing of the centuries up in the frozen lands.

Ten years ago Lieutenant G. Amdrup of the Danish navy, heading the Carlsberg expedition to east Greenwich, made an exhaustive ethnological survey of the little known Greenland coast from Ammassalik, at latitude 65.30, to Sabine Island, 74.30. The fruits of this expedition comprised facts about the present day Eskimos of the southernmost Ammassilik district and the relics of the lost tribes who inhabited the coast over a stretch of 300 miles from the great fiord of Kangerdingsuak to Cape Brewster at the entrance to Scoresby Sound.

The ethnological objects which he brought back with him lay unstudied until at the beginning of this year Dr. W. Thalbitzer undertook to classify the collection brought back by Amdrup.

The harpoon heads, needle cases, women's combs and children's toys represent an age in the life of the tribes long antedating the first contact between the Europeans of medieval Iceland and the Eskimo of the lower Greenland tip. Great antiquity, how great the scientist cannot determine, marks the life of these peoples.

"By the countless manifestations of originality," says the author, "the objects of the collection testify that this northeasterly group of Eskimos, after having been isolated from the rest of mankind, passed through a vigorous development of its own. Finally, in the implements from this corner of Greenland we meet with certain features which point to a special continuity between the northern and southern culture of the coast, an ancient connection long since broken off between the northerners and the inhabitants of the south—i. e., the population of the Sermilik and Ammassalik fiords. The highly developed culture of this intensely isolated group occupies a position apart in the Eskimo world.

"A number of types of implements, ornaments and traditions, which in their main features they have in common with all other Eskimos, have been individualized and transformed by them in accordance with their own personal taste and requirements, so that their culture has thereby received a stamp of its own which distinguishes it from all others. As it cannot possibly have been influenced from without it is with all its peculiarity genuinely Eskimo."

The southerly Eskimos, who are now living, and whose tribal continuity has been preserved intact, possess a very dim recollection of the peoples of the north coast whose deserted houses and ancient burying places have yielded the only clews to their existence. It is by tradition only that knowledge of those lost tribes has been preserved among the more enduring folk about the southern fiord. In their isolation the people about Scoresby and Franz Joseph's fiord dwindled into decay and disappeared.

The scientist does not make any attempt to specify the origin of these lost northern tribes and their southern kinsmen. Not enough is known of the archæology of the Greenland dwellers and those who live on the bridge of islands between Greenland and North Alaska to throw definite light on the beginnings of the race. Qn this subject Dr. Thalbitzer says:

"The two cultures both have their seat high up in the arctic regions and have been evolved under the same natural conditions for assuming any special relationship between the Point Barrow (Alaska) and the Greenland tribes of a direct immigration in olden times of the Point Barrow Eskimo to east Greenland. Furthermore, our knowledge of the past culture of the Eskimo races which dwelt between these two remote regions is far too slight to warrant such an assumption.

"There exists no connected account of the material culture of the great group of Eskimo dwelling at about the same latitude around the mouth of the Mackenzie river. Still more meager is our knowledge of that extinct Eskimo culture of which the sole witnesses are the ruins in the islands in the north Canadian archipelago; these islands from the most northerly bridge between the western Eskimo and Greenland."

AIR CRAFT'S NEW INDUSTRIES.

Mechanics at Work on Schemes to Make Sport Less Dangerous.

While our own government has decided that, as at present developed, the dirigible is more desirable than the aeroplane for military operations, there have already been organized, both here and abroad, numerous concerns for the sale of aeroplanes, says H. H. Windsor in Popular Mechanics, and adds:

"New mechanical devices always create new occupations, and in the wake of the air craft have followed schools for instruction in the building and operation of the aeroplane. As trained mechanics and scientists become more familiar with conditions unfavorable to flight it may be expected that the present element of danger will steadily decrease. Each accident stimulates fresh endeavor to prevent its recurrence, and by a series of elimination many risks that exist to-day will one by one disappear. While several instances have occurred recently where the operator of an aeroplane succeeded in getting safely to earth with a broken propeller or a dead engine, no one would think of attempting a descent without power from any height sufficient to cause injury. Now that a practical method of propulsion has been determined, inventors will not be long in taking up the question of safeguarding air flight, and something may be expected in this direction this year. Once this is accomplished, factories will spring up like magic and areoplanes become as commonplace, though probably much less numerous than automobiles."

"Son," he finally blurted out, "you look like a d—— fool!"

Later, the old major, who lived next door came in and greeted the boy heartily. "William," he said, with undisguised admiration. "You look exactly like your father did twenty years ago, when he came back from school."

A RETROACTIVE BLESSING.

Most small boys—and many other people, too—have experienced the mortification that comes from beginning a meal before the blessing is said. The usual reason for such a breach of etiquette is that the small boy—or the other person—did not know that the blessing was going to be said. The awkward feeling that is sure to follow such a blunder cannot be helped, but it may be mitigated. On one occasion, says Adlai E. Stevenson in "Something of Men I Have Known," a gentleman at a formal dinner, being very hungry and exhausted, made this mistake of starting in before grace.

After the blessing was asked, he turned to Mr. Knott and said, "I am humiliated at my conduct. I should have remembered that Presbyterians always say grace before meals."

To this Knott replied, "You ought not to feel so. That blessing of Doctor Bullock's was broad and general; in large measure retrospective as well as prospective. It reminds me of a little incident that occurred on the 'Rolling Fork.'

"An old-time deacon down there was noted for the lengthy blessing which at his table was the unfailing prelude to every meal. His hired man, Bill Taylor, an unconverted and impatient youth, had fallen into the habit of commencing his meal before the blessing had been fully invoked.

"The frown and the rebuke of the good deacon were of no avail in effecting the desired reform. Righteously indignant, the deacon, in a spirit possibly not the most devout, at length gave utterance to this petition:

"'For what we are about to receive, and for what William Taylor has already received, accept our thanks, O Lord!"

"Knott," said one of the guests, "you are the only man on earth who could have thought of such a story at just the opportune moment."

The temporary depression vanished, the premature guest was himself again, and was soon the life of the assemblage.

A MIRACLE OF THE SOIL.

Where Productive Farms Are Harvested Every Second Year.

The Palouse country in the far Northwest is a panorama of rolling hills, checkered with sagebrush and great wheat fields. Close to those wastes of curious grayish tint are rich fields covered with thick stands of wheat. The soil seems to have performed a miracle in producing this lavish wealth, but those standing crops are an indisputable proof of the triumph of dry farming. The fields are harvested only every second year and always plowed very deeply, the soil being thoroughly pulverized in the odd years.

A thick blanket of dust covers the earth—good fairy in disguise, for that dust blanket protects the ground and preserves the moisture of the winter snows. Although very little rain falls during the growing season, this stored up moisture is sufficient nourishment for the production of a magnificent crop. The soil appears to have a volcanic ash that needs only seed and moisture to bear abundantly.

In raising wheat here loss is occasioned from the action of windstorms, which blow off the dust blanket and expose the seed, so every effort is made to keep the blanket on. Instead of sowing two bushels of seed to the acre, as in the East, one bushel is here sufficient. The grain is cut by headers and combination harvesters and thrashers, which also sack it right in the field.

There may be some waste from overripe grain, but this method saves the cost of sacking and shocking, and in some cases reseeds the ground, resulting in a crop of young wheat very valuable for forage. This wheat grass has the same effect as clover in fertilizing, and the green fields add to the attractiveness of the landscape, standing side by side with fields of yellow wheat and black dust of summer fallowed tracts, with a touch of sagebrush now and then for contrast.

When the sturdy German farmers from California first experimented in this country they incurred a great deal of ridicule. Now those very methods are producing thirty to forty bushels an acre, while the maximum cost of cultivation an acre is $5. Such facts indicate why the western farmers are able to winter in California or other favorite American pleasure resorts, run automobiles or even tour Europe and winter on the Riviera.

Lack of Material.

"My dear young friend, put a watch on your passions."

"Can't put a watch on anything. Just pawned mine."—Baltimore American.

THE DEAR OLD WAY.

Penelope is the name given her by a contributor to the Manchester Guardian. She had studied cookery in a chemical laboratory, and the principles of housecleaning in the lecture room. Then, armed with a housewifery diploma, she returned to her mother's house and tried to put her acquired science into practice. She met, as may be imagined, the succession of defeats that bestrew the path of the daughter who stays at home; for it is only in books that the daughter of the house is a monument of tact and humor, and goes about her household duties jingling keys and singing catches of gay song.

"You don't know how difficult it is to be a daughter of the house with success," Penelope confided to a sympathetic friend, "when one-half of the house knew you as a baby, and the other half wishes it had never known you and your interfering ways at all.

"You should have seen their faces," she continued, "when I drew up a time table of meals for a week ahead, to save wasting cook's time and mine every morning.

"Cook nearly gave notice. She said it had never been done that way—and you know the rest.

"It's so queer, isn't it, that they think there is something wrong and unfeminine about you if you get the housekeeping done in a few minutes, instead of spreading it over the whole morning, and getting in everybody's way?

"It was the same with the housework," Penelope went on to complain. "I did my best to prove it to Sarah that if she were to do things in a labor-saving way she would probably have time to go for a walk every day before luncheon. That nearly caused a revolution.

"First, there was cook, who said she had never been in any place where the housemaid went for a walk before luncheon.,

"Then there was mother, who said she didn't want to interfere, of course, when I was doing things so nicely; but if I went away at any time she really couldn't have the maids going out every morning, with no one to see where they went.

"I represented that I should not dream in any case of seeing where they went; also that the maids went out on certain evenings, as it was, when it might be more desirable, and certainly less possible, to see where they went.

"Mother was just beginning to grasp my point, when Sarah spoiled it all by declaring that nothing would induce her to go out in the morning; she had never done such a thing in any other place, and she was not going to be put upon now. If she could have another evening instead, and an extra Sunday— Well, after that all was sound and confusion, and mother came out of it kind, but triumphant."

Penelope then described her attempt to induce the housemaid to profit by some new invention by which metal or plate polish was combined with a cleaning cloth.

"She seemed quite pleased about it at first," said Penelope, "when I pointed out that she need no longer fill her cupboard with plate brushes and bits of rag and tins of sticky brass paste, and that saucer of plate powder that sprinkles pink dust over everything when it gets dry. Then mother caught her one day rubbing up the drawing-room candlesticks with my new patent cloth, and because I couldn't prove on the spur of the moment that the brass would be none the worse for it fifty years hence, she said she would 'leave it to me, of course, but the old way seemed safer.'

"After that I found cook putting the cloth on the kitchen fire with the tongs, while Sarah hoped impressively that she hadn't 'given herself blood-poisoning by using the nasty, poisonous thing.'

"Now all the old saucers and tins and things have reappeared in the housemaid's cupboard, and the silver-cleaning once more occupies one whole morning, and the brass occupies another, and the stair-rods another, to say nothing of the useless copper pots and pans on the kitchen chimneypiece that cook never uses, but won't let me put away.

"Yes," concluded Penelope, with a dry smile, "we are jogging along comfortably now, quite in the style of a hundred years ago."

Husband to Give Away.

"If there is any woman in this town or in any other who sees her affinity in my husband, this is to notify her that she can have him by calling at my home, the Hilltop, Atchison, Kas., at any hour she may choose," says a disgruntled wife in the Atchison Globe.

"He grumbles at his meals, he puts his feet on the parlor chairs, and his head on the parlor cushions, he tells callers that his father was a poor man and that he never 'had any schooling.' He contradicts my statements when I tell of my kinship to the real prominent people, and if I don't watch him he 'visits' with the hired man and once asked the milkman to dinner!

"If there is any woman who sees her affinity in him let her hang around my house for a few minutes while I ask him for Christmas money. Then let her take him away if she still wants him."

S.S.S. CURES SKIN DISEASES

Lying just beneath the outer covering or tissue-skin, is a sensitive membranous flesh in which are imbedded thousands of small blood vessels. It is through these tiny veins and arteries that nutriment is supplied from the blood to the different pores, glands and lymphatics. Thus the skin is kept healthy, and free from all eruption or disease, by pure blood. But when impurities and humors infect the circulation its nourishing properties are diminished and instead of supplying the skin with healthful properties it constantly irritates and diseases the delicate fibres, pores and glands with sharp uratic matter. Then the skin tissues inflame, swell and ulcerate and some form of skin disease appears on the surface. Applying soothing lotions, salves, etc., to the outer eruptions does not purify the blood and therefore the skin trouble can not be cured in this manner. S. S. S. cures all skin diseases by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood. It cools the acid-heated circulation, builds it up to its normal strength and thickness, multiplies its rich, nutritious corpuscles, and adds to its purity in every way. Then the skin, instead of being irritated and inflamed by sour impurities is nourished, soothed and softened by this cooling, healthy stream of blood. S. S. S. Cures Eczema, Acne, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Poison Oak, boils, pimples, rashes, etc. Book on Skin Diseases free to all who write.

Strange Light in Shelby County.

Another strange light, or perhaps the same one that appeared in Hendricks township, near Marietta, six weeks ago, now has the residents of the vicinity of J. A. Grile's farm, in Washington township, Shelby county, guessing. The light makes its appearance about nine o'clock at night at the farthest point on the farm from the house and comes toward his residence at a terrific speed, stopping within fifty yards of the house, where it disappears.

Negro Shot.

Susie Woodward, colored, 28 years old wife of James Woodward, of Jeffersonville, Sunday shot and killed Will Long, also colored, of that city. The two were together at the time in a house on Cherry alley, a street frequented by negroes. Long was shot through the heart and died instantly. The woman was arrested, but has refused to discuss the matter.

AVOID HARSH DRUGS.

Many Cathartics Tend to Cause Injury To the Bowels.

If you are subject to constipation, you should avoid strong drugs and cathartics. They only give temporary relief and their reaction is harmful and sometimes more annoying than constipation. They in no way effect a cure and their tendency is to weaken the already weak organs with which they come in contact.

We honestly believe that we have the best constipation treatment ever devised. Our faith in it is so strong that we sell it on the positive guarantee that it shall not cost the user a cent if it does not give entire satisfaction and completely remedy constipation. This preparation is called Rexall Orderlies. These are prompt, soothing and most effective in action. They are made of a recent chemical discovery. Their principal ingredient is odorless, tasteless and colorless. Combined with other well known ingredients, long established for their usefulness in the treatment of constipation, it forms a tablet which is eaten just like candy. They may be taken at any time, either day or night, without fear of their causing any inconvenience whatever. They do not gripe, purge nor cause nausea. They act without causing any pain or excessive looseness of the bowels. They are ideal for children, weak, delicate persons and aged people as well as for the most hearty person.

They come in two size packages, 12 tablets 10 cents, 36 tablets 25 cents. Remember you can obtain them only at our store,—the Rexall Store. The Andrews-Schwenk Drug Co.

LAWS INADEQUATE

This Is the Complaint Made by Philippine Military Authorities.

Manila, April 4.—Owing to the lamentable inadequacy of the law the two Japanese who were arrested here a few days ago on the charge of being spies, have been released, and they sailed for Japan today. The military authorities regard the moral effect of their release as almost calamitous, encouraging others to freely probe into the costly defenses here. The Americans demand that congress remedy the ridiculous criminally negligent situation.

General Duvall, the military commander, following instructions from Washington, notified Governor General Forbes that he would release the prisoners unless the civil authorities desired to prosecute them. The completest investigation, however, showed that the American law was inadequate to punish them, while the application of the Spanish military code was doubtful. A successful prosecution was therefore unlikely.
